Pharmacologic anticoagulation is used to prevent and treat venous and arterial thromboembolic disease. Some elderly patients experience serious, and sometimes life-threatening, bleeding episodes when taking anticoagulants, primarily warfarin and heparin, and have an increased risk of such bleeding. Aging leads to changes in both the pharmacokinetics and pharmacodynamics of these agents. Clinicians should be alert to the risk of anticoagulant-induced bleeding in elderly patients and should minimize these risks when initiating, continuing, and terminating anticoagulation in elderly patients.Martin Neufeld (politician) Martin Neufeld (February 25, 1889 – September 29, 1957) was a Canadian politician.
